itle:Traditional socio-cultural systems as models for stability and security in NigeriaAuthors:Aderinto, A. Akinwale, A.Year:2008Periodical:Journal of environment and cultureVolume:5Issue:2Pages:90-106Language:EnglishGeographic term:NigeriaSubjects:values culture contact social changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the rep partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Work Akinwale, A.Year:2008Periodical:Journal of environment and cultureVolume:5Issue:2Pages:90-106Language:EnglishGeographic term:NigeriaSubjects:values culture contact social changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, t stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the re- partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Work
Year:2008Periodical:Journal of environment and cultureVolume:5Issue:2Pages:90-106Language:EnglishGeographic term:NigeriaSubjects:valuesculture contactsocial changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, to stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the re- partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Work Periodical:Journal of environment and cultureVolume:5Issue:2Pages:90-106Language:EnglishGeographic term:NigeriaSubjects:values culture contact social changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, to stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the rep partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Work Volume:5Issue:2Pages:90-106Language:EnglishGeographic term:NigeriaSubjects:valuesculture contact social changeculture contact social changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, to stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the rep partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Wol Issue:2Pages:90-106Language:EnglishGeographic term:NigeriaSubjects:valuesculture contactsocial changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, to stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the rep partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Wol Pages:90-106Language:EnglishGeographic term:NigeriaSubjects:valuesculture contactsocial changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, to stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the req partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Wol Language:EnglishGeographic term:NigeriaSubjects:valuesculture contactsocial changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, to stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the req partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Wol Geographic term: Nigeria Subjects: values culture contact social change Abstract: This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, to stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the re- partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Work Subjects: values culture contact social change Abstract: This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, t stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the re- partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Wor
Abstract: This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, t stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the re- partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Wor social changeAbstract:This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, t stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the rec partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Wol Abstract: This paper examines the necessity of traditional sociocultural systems for stability a values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, the stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the reportially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Work values into traditional social institutions, indigenous values remain strong. Further, the stability and security in Nigerian society. Traditional communities that are on the re- partially reject the imposition of external values, as exemplified in the case of a Work knowledge system is very important and should be utilized to promote stability, sec and security include the African kinship system, extended family networks, and inte Harambee model of solidarity in Kenya	he mixtur ceiving er Id Bank g urity and d